Federal and State laws require drivers to inspect their vehicles to ensure the safe operation of the vehicle. The driver must: Watch gauges for signs of trouble and ensure they are operable. Use his/her senses to check for problems (look, listen, smell and feel). Check critical items such as, tires and rims, Front and rear wheel seals for leaks, Brakes, Lights, Mirrors, Brake and electrical connections to trailers, Trailer coupling devices, Mud flaps, Fire extinguishers, seat belts, Check fluid levels (engine oil, engine coolant, transmission fluid), Utilize cargo securement devices such as nets, straps and chains. (These devices must be applied to ensure that all material remains secured on the truck. Particular attention should be given to hazardous materials which pose a risk to health, safety and property during transportation. The rules require diamond shaped warning signs on vehicles transporting hazardous material. Some examples of hazardous materials are diesel fuel, gasoline, pesticides and compressed gas. Specifically, if you are transporting compressed gases, the vehicle must have racks to hold cylinders. Alternatively, the cargo space must be flat, and the cylinders must be held upright or braced lying down flat or in boxes that will keep them from turning over. The driver must have a Commercial Driver's License with the applicable hazardous endorsement before driving vehicles with placards.
