

CORONAVIRUS

TRANSIT WORKERS CAN'T WORK FROM HOME!

Transit workers keep New York City moving during blizzards, hurricanes, terror attacks, intense heat and cold. Add medical emergencies to that list. Transit workers are aggressively dealing with the Coronavirus emergency.

Bus and subway workers are working hard to keep millions of New Yorkers safe from the transmission of coronavirus in the transit system by disinfecting the insides of buses and subway cars, and sanitizing turnstiles, seats, handrails, and other areas that could spread the deadly virus.

If the MTA's new imported hatchet man, Anthony McCord, or anyone else at the MTA, is still thinking about laying off transit workers, they should have their heads examined.
