

THE PAIN WON'T GO AWAY – BUT JUSTICE IN COURT WILL GIVE SOME RELIEF

The holiday season is the time of the year when for many families, a feeling of loss is more intense than ever.

For the first time this year, Gabrielle Pena, now a freshman in college, won't pick out a Christmas tree from the Christmas tree farm with her dad and best friend, William. William's widow, Nancy, will also have to cope with the often unbearable loss of her husband.

TWU Local 100 members have an opportunity to make Nancy and Gabrielle's life brighter by appearing in force in court on Wednesday, December 3 at 9AM in Manhattan Criminal Court. Domic Wilby, who killed William Pena when he drove drunkenly into his City bus, will be in court, too. He has had four postponements and the trial has not yet started. Wilby is alive – at least his family knows that. William is not. Let's make sure that Nancy and Gabrielle know that our Local 100 transit family is in the house, that we support them, and that we demand that the trial begin and justice be served.

William Pena

Be There Wednesday, December 3, 2014 at 9AM

Manhattan Criminal Court,
100 Centre Street,
part 32 13th Floor – Judge Gregory Carro

