

HEROES NOT ZEROES

The 36,000 members of TWU Local 100, the men and women who operate the world's greatest and most efficient public transportation system, thank the New York Daily News for highlighting our transit heroes.

Transit workers bring attention, commitment, and dedication to our jobs every day. Most of us live in the communities we serve. We take pride in keeping America's largest and busiest transit system running 24/7, and in keeping our passengers safe.

We don't need measures that endanger our passengers and degrade our work, measures like taking conductors off the trains, or making bus driving part-time work and forcing us to juggle driving with other jobs to make ends meet.

We do need a fair contract that allows us security on the job and peace of mind at home. We are not asking for the sun, the moon and the stars. We just want to take care of our families. It's time for the MTA to step up to the plate and offer more than zeroes to transit's "hometown heroes."
