

TWU LOCAL 100 CELEBRATES JUNETEENTH

The nation celebrates July 4th as Independence Day from the repression of the British Empire in 1776.

We now celebrate Juneteenth as Independence Day for millions of African Americans who were not officially free for another 100 years, and who today still must fight for full and equal treatment and opportunity in American society.

TWU Local 100 proudly recognizes Juneteenth as a day to recommit our union to the ongoing fight for equality in our workplace, and social justice in our communities.

TWU Local 100 represents 46,000 workers who operate and maintain the New York City transit system, as well as workers in the school bus and tour bus industries; Liberty Lines Transit, New York Waterway, and privately owned bus companies in the City and Westchester County.
